CONQUEST PREFERABLE TO ANNIHILATION

PARDON the Bonanza for interjecting a suggestion in the general scramble of ideas as to how war should be conducted abroad. It read yesterday: "British divers sink four more German steamers." It also perused a compilation of the merchantmen, transports, trawlers and battleships that the central powers have sent to the bottom since the war began.

The combat seems to have developed into a campaign of destruction rather than that of conquest. The victor gains nothing when he burns a village or sinks a ship. How much better it would be to preserve the integrity of the former and the identity of the latter. That which is captured is not lost to the world. It becomes the property of the captor and possesses worth to him.

In the old cave days embattlements were for the purpose of gaining trophies and accumulating wealth. Nothing was destroyed. It was taken and conserved. The victor had a tangible asset to show for his prowess, but what does a nation gain if it levels a village or sinks a merchantman of its antagonist? The one loses; the other does not gain. In the present war, the greatest war in all history, the annals record but desolation and destruction, not conquest. The loser loses everything; the winner gains nothing. Really it is an ultra-barbarous way of settling international difficulties and it is a game of blind man's buff, where all are blind, as well as being devoid of other senses and sensibilities.

A DECADE GAINED

ONE cause for the depreciation of values of Tonopah mine securities this summer was, of course, the low price of silver, but other reasons are to be considered, one being the general supposition that the life of a silver mine is limited to a decade and a half. This is the life of many properties, it is true, some being considerably less in term of years.

But, on the other hand, there are silver mines operated today that were discovered and worked centuries ago and there seemingly is no limit to their production. Tonopah district has been prospected but in the very center of its mineralization, in lines radiating out from the croppings where the original discovery was made.

It has not been proven that the extent of the ledges has been reached in depth and it is assured that the zone has not been followed to its limitations east and west. An important discovery was made in the far western area of the Tonopah Extension during the past week, while the Halifax is proving up the territory to the eastward in wonderful fashion. "These two finds alone," said an eastern man who is heavily interested in Tonopah holdings, "add at least ten years to Tonopah's productivity."

A LACK OF STATE SPIRIT

TO REVERT to a theme discussed in Saturday's Bonanza, this is the admission day of Nevada, a state 51 years of age, just in the prime of its statehood. Over the border the native sons and daughters make of the occasion of the anniversary of the admission of their state a fiesta. It happens that the spirit has not been fully developed in Nevada, although it should be. The closing of banks and public offices, in obedience to statute, is a form of celebration, as is also the displaying of flags, but it is noticeable that the motto, "All for Our Country," is not on display in anywhere a resemblance to the exhibition of the bear of California, even though Nevada's history is not less honorable, nor its motto subservient to the California design.

As the years pass there should be greater pride in our statehood and the causes which led to its establishment. We have national loyalty, but should have state patriotism as well, for the nation is but a coordination of states and none of them has a prouder history than that which was born of battles and assumed its arduous duties of statehood in order that the nation itself might be preserved.

TEMPORARY REVIVAL OF BUSINESS

JUST at the moment there is a temporary revival of business, the bulk being war orders. This little boom is but temporary, and mills must provide during these spurts for the dull period that follows. The mills will not run long losing money in operating, and until the tariff is readjusted and confidence restored in this country it is good advice for all mill workers to shoulder their load and perform the duties required of them without much fault-finding.

Once our country is back to normal through restoration of the protective tariff, mill wages will advance without the interference of the paid agitator. The manufacturers are perfectly willing to share their prosperity and keep their organizations together as much as possible when it is all going out and nothing coming in. There is plenty of evidence to support this statement, and the advance in wages covering the past five or ten years shows conclusively that manufacturers are ready to share prosperity with their help.

CLIPPED AND CREDITED

All that seems to stand between Great Britain and conscription is a Zeppelin raid now and then.—Indianapolis Star.

John Bull has stopped forcing himself to think that it would be easy to force the Dardanelles.—Baltimore Sun.

The United States has recognized Carranza; but anybody could do that, by his whiskers.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

That loud noise you hear is made by the Scotch, who are applauding the British "no treating" law.—New Orleans States.

London is 746 miles from Berlin by mail route, but a great deal farther than that by war route.—Manchester Union.

"General Hamilton loses command in the Dardanelles"—but he didn't lose it to the Turks.—Philadelphia North American.

By starting a little revolution Guatemala calls attention to the fact that it is still on the map.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

What with frequent Zeppelin raids from the skies, business in dear old Lunnon must be looking up.—Manchester Union.

Henry Ford is a great automobile manufacturer. Pity he does not stick to what he does so well.—Syracuse Post-Standard.

It is wonderful how clearly a public officer can see what ought to be done after his term of office is over.—Pittsburg Post.

The premier says Greece will maintain her policy of armed neutrality. So, no doubt, will Constantinople and Smyrna.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

There is a rotation of crops in the railroad business. After receivers come reorganization.—Portland Oregonian.

Despite the fact that prosperity has ruined many men, no man can be found who is not willing to take the risk.—Florida Times-Union.

It is still a question whether the Panama canal or the Dardanelles can be opened first; but neither will be opened with a prayer.—Boston Advertiser.

The Bulgarians are telling that Serbia drove them into the war. In other words, and slangy, the Bulgarians are throwing the bull.—Galveston News.
